Quarterly Portfolio Update

Canadian equities rose over the quarter, although gains were moderated somewhat as oil and material stocks continued to struggle. The S&P/TSX Composite Index rose 3.3 percent over the quarter. Gains were broadly based across all sectors except materials, which fell significantly. The Fund's underweight position in this sector added value. The energy sector rose, however two large holdings within the Fund declined and were a drag on performance. Bank stocks rose but underperformed the market. While the portfolio adviser does not see any significant risks that would derail the Canadian economy, commodity prices are weak, housing is slowing and consumer spending is lacklustre. In this environment, the portfolio adviser believes interest rates will remain low and quality dividend-paying stocks should continue to perform well. (March 2013)

Summary Fund Objective

To provide a high level of after-tax income and steady growth by investing primarily in high-quality, high-yield stocks and other income-producing Canadian investments.

Fund Distribution

The Fund may distribute net income quarterly and net realized capital gains annually.
